Introduction

The targeted killing of members of religious and ethnic minorities in Bangladesh is not a new phenomenon. Even after independence in 1971, violence against the Hindu minority did not end. Census figures show the Hindu share of the population falling from about 22 per cent in 1951 to under 8 per cent (7.95 per cent) in 2022. A sustained pattern of killings, rape, persecution, land-grabbing, forced displacement and intimidation has pushed the community towards demographic erasure, while the Indigenous Jumma peoples of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and Christian and Buddhist communities, continue to face violence and impunity.

The political upheaval of 5 August 2024 and the installation of an unelected interim administration opened another deeply troubling chapter. In the aftermath, Hindu homes, businesses and temples were attacked across the country. The Bangladesh Hindu Buddhist Christian Unity Council (BHBCUC) recorded 2,963 incidents of communal violence between 5 August 2024 and 30 June 2026, and 44 minority deaths in the first six months of 2026 alone. Killings have continued after the national election of 12 February 2026.

This report compiles 146 named victims (119 Hindu, 5 Buddhist Barua and 22 Indigenous Chakma, Marma, Tripura, Bawm, Santal and Munda) whose deaths were reported between 4 August 2024 and 27 October 2026. They include deaths at the hands of mobs and deaths in police, army or jail custody, among them former minister Ramesh Chandra Sen and musician Proloy Chaki. Each entry gives the date, name, address and identity of the victim, a short account of what happened, a link to a published news report and a QR code that opens that report.

The purpose of this report is not to present minority deaths as isolated incidents, nor to separate them from the wider human rights situation in Bangladesh. Its purpose is to set out, case by case, deaths that have been documented with a named victim and a published source, so that public discussion rests on verifiable evidence rather than on assumption or speculation, and so that the toll is neither overestimated nor underestimated. In this way, we hope to give policymakers, researchers, journalists and the public a clearer picture.

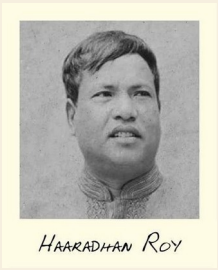

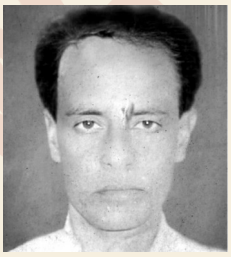

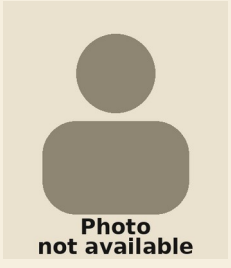

The cases are drawn from reports published by news media and by human rights and community organisations. Inclusion of a case does not mean that a religious motive, or the identity of those responsible, has been established by any investigation or court; in a number of cases the motive remains disputed or under investigation. Readers are encouraged to consult the source linked to each entry. What the cases share is that the victims belonged to minority communities, that most were killed by private actors or died in custody, and that in very few has anyone yet been convicted.

These cases represent only those that could be named and sourced. Many incidents go unreported, and human rights observers believe the true toll is considerably higher. Every death must be subject to an impartial investigation, and those responsible, regardless of rank or affiliation, must face justice.

We call on national and international human rights organisations, the United Nations and all institutions committed to justice to press for independent inquiries, to protect Bangladesh’s religious and ethnic minorities, and to bring perpetrators to account. Silence is complicity.

About the sources

Each QR code opens the source cited in the “News Link” column. Reports come from Bangladeshi outlets (Prothom Alo, The Daily Star, Dhaka Tribune, bdnews24.com, The Financial Express), investigative outlets (Netra News), Indigenous rights media (Hill Voice), the documentation reports of the Bangladesh Hindu Buddhist Christian Unity Council (BHBCUC), the Database on Hindu Atrocities of the Initiative for the Survival and Rights of Hindus in Bangladesh (ISRHB; hindu-persecution.com), the Human Rights Congress for Bangladesh Minorities (HRCBM), Wikipedia and Indian and international outlets. Ages and spellings of names sometimes differ between reports; the most consistent version is shown, with alternatives in brackets. Some cases are reported by a single source. Photographs were supplied by the compilers or taken from published reports; images of the deceased have been blurred, illustrative images are labelled, and where no photograph was available a placeholder is shown.

Disclaimer

The information in this report has been compiled from news reports published by media outlets in Bangladesh, India and elsewhere, and from reports and statements of human rights and community organisations, as cited for each entry. Democracy, Rights and Persecution Watch (DRPW) Inc. has not independently investigated each incident and makes no representation or warranty as to the accuracy, completeness or currency of the information. Names, ages, dates, places and circumstances are reproduced as they appeared in the cited sources, which may contain errors or differ from one another.

Inclusion of a case does not imply that any person, group, organisation, political party or authority is responsible for a death, nor that any motive has been established. No allegation of criminal responsibility against any identifiable individual is made or intended, and every person is presumed innocent until proven guilty by a court of law.

This report is published in good faith and in the public interest for the purposes of human rights documentation, research and advocacy. The views expressed are those of the compilers. To the fullest extent permitted by law, DRPW, its office-bearers, members and the authors accept no liability for any loss, damage, claim or consequence arising from the publication of, use of, or reliance on this report or the sources it cites.

Each account in the “As reported” field summarises what the cited source reported at the time of publication and may have been superseded by later developments, including investigations, arrests, charges, acquittals or court findings. Statements attributed to families, witnesses, officials or organisations are their allegations or accounts, not findings of DRPW.

Nothing in this report is intended to promote hatred against, or to attribute collective blame to, any religious, ethnic or political community. Photographs are reproduced for non-commercial human rights documentation; any rights holder who objects to their use may request removal or attribution. This report does not constitute legal advice.

Right of reply and corrections: any person or organisation who believes that information in this report is inaccurate or concerns them unfairly may write to info@drpw.org with supporting details. DRPW will review every request promptly and in good faith and, where warranted, correct, clarify or remove the information in a subsequent version.
